Colorado Company Announces Online Solution to Calculate Colorado's New Standardized Spousal Support Guidelines

Monument, CO - January 1, 2014 - Colorado Family Law attorneys and their clients can now go online to quickly determine spousal support and child support payments that meet new state guidelines effective today. ProVault LLC, announces immediate availability of the first online Spousal Support and Child Support Applications in Colorado.

"Our Family Law Attorney customers have been asking us to develop these applications," said Debbie Mignola, ProVault CEO. "In the past people going through a divorce had to fill out several long and complicated forms by hand. Then a paralegal would transcribe them so the information could be analyzed and calculated. These new applications will save family law professionals and their clients a lot of time, money, errors, and frustration."

The release of these new online applications coincides with important new guidelines for spousal support (C.R.S. 14-11-114) and updated guidelines for child support (C.R.S. 14-11-115) that become effective in Colorado on January 1st, 2014. Previously Colorado statutes provided little guidance to the court concerning spousal support awards, which led to inconsistency in the amount and term of spousal support awarded in different judicial districts across the state in cases that involved similar circumstances.

Many Colorado Family Law attorneys and thousands of their clients already use ProVault to create Sworn Financial Statements for disclosing financial information such as income, expenses, savings, debts, property, and investments. The new Spousal Support and Child Support Applications share data with ProVault's Sworn Financial Statement Application to simplify the entire disclosure process and eliminate the need for paper forms and duplicate data entry.

"I need to show my clients the support payment for different scenarios such as different parenting plan schedules, income levels and recurring expenses," said Teresa Drexler, the Managing Partner of The Gasper Law Group's Domestic Relations and Family Law practice. "We participated in testing the beta program of the new spousal support and child support applications, which proved to be a real time saver with tremendous value added for the client." Attorney Drexler commented that "ProVault makes it easy to compare several child support and spousal maintenance options side-by-side, which allows our clients to make important decisions when confronted with multiple options." The integration between a clients' Sworn Financial Statement and support data is "convenient because I only have to go to one place to enter and update their data."
